

Hip Resurfacing Information Cards

Print out the cards. Cut them apart along the solid black lines, fold in half along the dotted lines, and carry in your wallet or purse, to hand out as needed!

Hip Resurfacing I have hip dysplasia, also called Developmental Dysplasia of the Hip (DDH). This means that one or both of my hips are deformed; the bones are the wrong shape, and this makes it hard for me to move and walk normally. This is a congenital condition, nothing that I've done has caused this deformity. The hip joint has deteriorated, and developed arthritis as well as causing other problems. <hr/> To correct this problem I have recently had a hip resurfacing. In this surgery the top of the femur is chopped off and replaced with an artificial femur head, and the hip socket is given a smooth liner like a cup. This surgery is relatively new, and is a good substitute for a total hip replacement for some patients like myself.	Hip Resurfacing I have hip dysplasia, also called Developmental Dysplasia of the Hip (DDH). This means that one or both of my hips are deformed; the bones are the wrong shape, and this makes it hard for me to move and walk normally. This is a congenital condition, nothing that I've done has caused this deformity. The hip joint has deteriorated, and developed arthritis as well as causing other problems. <hr/> To correct this problem I have recently had a hip resurfacing. In this surgery the top of the femur is chopped off and replaced with an artificial femur head, and the hip socket is given a smooth liner like a cup. This surgery is relatively new, and is a good substitute for a total hip replacement for some patients like myself.
---	---

Hip Resurfacing I have hip dysplasia, also called Developmental Dysplasia of the Hip (DDH). This means that one or both of my hips are deformed; the bones are the wrong shape, and this makes it hard for me to move and walk normally. This is a congenital condition, nothing that I've done has caused this deformity. The hip joint has deteriorated, and developed arthritis as well as causing other problems. <hr/> To correct this problem I have recently had a hip resurfacing. In this surgery the top of the femur is chopped off and replaced with an artificial femur head, and the hip socket is given a smooth liner like a cup. This surgery is relatively new, and is a good substitute for a total hip replacement for some patients like myself.	Hip Resurfacing I have hip dysplasia, also called Developmental Dysplasia of the Hip (DDH). This means that one or both of my hips are deformed; the bones are the wrong shape, and this makes it hard for me to move and walk normally. This is a congenital condition, nothing that I've done has caused this deformity. The hip joint has deteriorated, and developed arthritis as well as causing other problems. <hr/> To correct this problem I have recently had a hip resurfacing. In this surgery the top of the femur is chopped off and replaced with an artificial femur head, and the hip socket is given a smooth liner like a cup. This surgery is relatively new, and is a good substitute for a total hip replacement for some patients like myself.
---	---